Saturday evening between 8 and 1 clock Officer Carney, of the city police force, was passing through the open ground between the B. & O. tracks in Hempfield yards and the board eards on Sixteenth street, when he noticed two men walking along beside noticed two men walking along beside the freight cars. He looked that way again in a moment, but they had disappeared. Thinking they were two drunken men, possibly, who might need looking after, he looked about through the board piles for them.

As he entered one open space of about cight feet between two board piles, he saw two men there, one a very large, heavily built man, and the other shorter and lighter. He went close up to the larger man to get a good look at his face in the dim light, in doing this turning his back to the smaller man. The latter at once leaped on the officer's back and clutched his throat in a grasp which still left marks of rough usage last night. The larger man at the same time pulled his ravolver and covered Carney, saying,
"Throw up your hands."

The men evidently counted on "doing un". Carney without the gun of the larger man, and wrested it from him. He cried out, with an oath, "He's get my gun," and seemed to weaken. The little fellow's grasp on weaken. The little fellow's grasp on the officer's throat grew stronger, and feeling the wind being shut off, Carney braced himself upon the board pile and shook off the man on his back. Before this he tried to fire the revolver, but it was not a self-cocker, and he could not. When he put his hand out to steady himself, the big man recovered possession of the pistol, and the little one being shaken off also drew his. Carney dodged behind the board pile and drew his own revolver, which was in his hip pocket and hard to get at owing to his belt and coat. He fired three shots, when the men disappeared, rinning Nineteenth street, when some one cried of the count. "The factory is on fire." He took the fire alarm key hanging in the building and ran to pull in box 34, but something was wrong with his key or he was nervous. At any rate it would not work. He then ran for the telephone. Officers time, and Carney tried his key in vain. That this was the fault of the keys, and not of the lock, was shown by the fact that Officer Gaus had no difficulty in the locking it with his key.

Valuable time was thus lost. It is probable, however, that the building could not have been saved under any direumstances. As it was, Chief Dunning, who was formerly foreman of the works and knew something about the location of the machinery, saw that the beat that he could hope to do was to save the warehouse adjoining, and he directed the adjoining buildings. With rare good judgment he kept the water off the machinery, letting it cool gradually. Had a stream been thrown upon it while the machinery, letting it cool gradually.

Frank Miller, the colored pitcher of last year's Cuban Giants, is with the Keystones and will pitch in the game against Wheeling next Thursday.

has the nerve and executive ability to carry these ideas out.

That Characterized the Play of Some of the

That kindergarten of blasphemy and ill-breeding, otherwise known as the Cleveland base ball club, gave two exhibitions of blackguard base ball playing on the Island Park last Friday and Saturday. What a strange and striking contrastit was to the gentlemanly demeano of the members of the Pittsburgh League club, who conducted themselves as club, who conducted themselves as charmingly on the diamond as they were agreeable and well-behaved off it. If any excuse could be found for the outrageous conduct of the Forest City team the INTELLIGENCER would gladly furnish it, not only for the sake of the men themselves, but for the credit of the sport, the good reputation of which they sadly marred. The spectacle of a man like Capt. Faatz, standing over six feet in his stockings, cursing a man one-n his stockings, cursing a man one bird of his size and using language known only to the gutter gamin, not only disgusted but righteously enraged eputation attached to the Clevelands in reputation attached to the Clevelands in their matchless efforts to out-Herod Herod as Tommy Toughs. In justice to several members of the nine it must be said that they behaved like gentlemen and were heartily ashamed of the con-duct of their fellow players. Peter Hotaling, six years old in disposi-tion and temper and lorty-five or flity by the strawberry mark on his mouth, is as vile a man as ever swung a bat or mufwile a man as ever swing a bat or mul-icle a fly. If his capabilities were com-mensurate with his talk—such as it is—the possibilities of his achievements cannot be computed. Manager Wil-liams as a matter of self protection should have a guardian appointed for liams as a matter of self protection should have a guardian appointed for his mouth. Mister Hotaling has been playing ball since the latter part of the sixties, but he has yet to learn the first instincts of the gentleman. It may not be too late yet to send him back to the nursery, where his conspicuously child-ish conduct on the ball field Saturday yerr properly places him. His abuse of ish conduct on the ball field Saturday very properly places him. His abuse of Manager Buckenberger was in such bad taste—to put it mildly—that it called forth a remonstrance from one of his fellow heathens, but all to no purposes. It is a pity that talents like his should be wasted on the ball field when they would make him shine in other walks in life as the first-class duffer he aims to be. But it would require much more space than it is worth to relate all the shortcomings of the Cleveland club. The action of the Wheeling management, however, will have a salutary effect and let their patrons know that their sense of decency cannot be shocked with impunity. The contrition of Cuptain Fantz their patrons know that their sense of decency cannot be shocked with inpunity. The contrition of Captain Faatz at the Police station, while it may have been sincere, will not wipe out the stain on his reputation. Saturday's incident was the first to break the record of good conduct which has heretofore prevailed at the Island Park, and it is the sincere wish of all lovers of the game that it may be the last. Several tender-hearted citizens wrestled with the management of the Wheeling association to have the charge against Faatz withdrawn, fearing that it would hurt the reputation of Wheeling abroad, but it was useless. Hurt Wheeling's reputation abroad? What, for preserving order and deceney in a public place? If reputation can be injured by such methods the more injury. Kalamazoo has decided to sell only 20 season tickets. As the first 6,000 admisthat it would hart the reputation of Wheeling abroad, but it was useless. Hurt Wheeling's reputation abroad?
